

Field Notes - Two Columns

The first column opens with a question that has no answer, so it keeps going instead. Newspapers were built this way: two thoughts side by side, each pretending the other does not exist. Column geometry is a social contract between the author and the margin.

The second column is shorter on purpose. It prefers a margin note to a paragraph and a chapter. magazine trusts its readers the way a deck trusts its readers. Column geometry is enough to lean, never enough to leave.